Dolores near Eighth. The rare collection, assembled by Pat Hathaway, also includes pictures of the coast, portraits of well-known personalities and street scenes such as the one below, depicting the corner of Ocean and Monte Verde as it looked in 1924. For more photographs to stimulate the nostalgic mood, see centerfold, pages 8-9.

Opposing Open Space New Tax District:

Many of the Monterey Peninsula Taxpayers are now receiving the new painful increased tax bills and this does not yet include any of the 10 percent per hundred initial taxation, plus possible bond issues for new open space acquisitions or condemnations of private property, that may double or triple the 10 percent initial tax.

The people that have signed enthusiastically in haste may change their minds when they realize the consequences. They may have a chance to change their minds when the signatures will be presented before the Board of Supervisors or at the November elections.

Can we afford to add additional taxes to our over-taxed homes, we eventually will tax ourself out of our homes.

This Monterey Penn. College District covers approximately 660 square miles and of this only about 10 percent is inhabitable. How much more open space can we use? There is a need to put a ceiling on our property taxes!!

Very truly yours

adjoining and it is their proximity that aggravates the situation. Likewise, meetings between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. coincide with the overflow parking problem from the business district as restricted parking extends to Lincoln and Eighth.

The "Greatest good to the greatest majority" is best served by protecting the residential areas of Carmel from further erosion by non-residential uses.

This request for rezoning involves an entire on-half city block, ten building lots, virtually forty thousand square feet of land, and at a time when the City Council is undertaking to limit both structures and building sites within the business district to ten thousand and twelve thousand square feet respectively.

Hopefully again that people will read my words rather than their own emotional reactions, I submit that the Carmel Foundation should: a) remain within its present physical confines, or; b) Secure space within the existing business district for any expansion of physical facilities. Such space is available and in locations much better suited to the purposes of their tenants and members.

Very truly yours,
H. LLOYD PRAEGER

Entered as Second Class Matter February 10, 1915, at the U.S. Post Office in Carmel-by-the-Sea, under the act of March 3, 1879.

AS EVIDENCED by this July, 1923 photo, George Luker's friends and family have been lighting fires on Carmel Point beach for some time. On the 4th of July, however, Luker was not allowed to "light his fire." Then a baby sea otter lit his fire.

Baby sea otter crisis cools beach picnic flap

It was the eve of the 4th of July, about dusk—fireworks time—and Carmelite George Luker and several other residents were involved in a flap with the lessees of the Jean Arthur home on Carmel Point.

The lessees said Luker could not build a fire on the beach down from the house. Luker said he had been doing so for years. The police arrived on the scene. They agreed with the lessees. Luker said the police told him he would be arrested if he built the fire. Luker said he couldn't believe it.

Then a baby sea otter, three to four months old, appeared on the scene.

"It swam up on the beach. On the sand," said Luker. "I realized it possibly could be saved if people with the know how got to the animals."

"So I got on the telephone and called beaches and parks (the Department of Parks and Recreation office in Monterey) and they referred me to the sheriff's office, but they were pretty busy," Luker paused for just a second. "With keeping the fires off the Point. There was no action from them."

"Then Fred Farr (of Carmel) was down there and I got him to go up and telephone also. He called several places. "No action."

"Then I finally called Mrs. (Nathaniel) Owings' (president of Friends of the Sea Otter) residence in the Big Sur, and she was on top of Mt. Ranier (in Washington). But her housekeeper gave me a list of several people of Friends of the Sea Otter. I called all these people and no response—they were out."

"So then I called back to the Owings' residence and she (the housekeeper, who eventually came down to the beach herself) called Don Rich (chief ranger of the Point Lobos State Reserve), and he came down and took charge."

"The pup finally gained strength after about an hour and swam out on his own. "They've saved a dozen or so out there. This one got separated from its mother."

Luker, who had, by this time, done quite a bit of running between the telephone and the sea otter pup, while he had him on the scene asked Rich about the beach fire controversy.

geological survey was needed to determine that exact boundary."

If Luker could have proven his fire was within the park boundary, he could have lit the fire.

Of course, he couldn't do that.

Well, while Luker didn't get to light his fire, the troubled sea otter apparently lit his fire.

Remember When?

50 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, July 7, 1921:

"Pomander Walk" at the Forest Theatre on Saturday, Sunday and Monday evenings was greeted by large audiences.

The Carmel Valley Fruit Growers' Association, it is rumored, has let a contract for the erection of a large warehouse in Monterey.

Carmel's Grand Old Man, Delos Goldsmith, has gone to his fathers. He passed away in Monterey on Sunday evening last, at the age of 92 years.

Rung by the rung the Carmel firemen are climbing to the top of the percentage table. Again the boys walked away with the baseball game last Sunday, defeating the Pacific Grove boys 3 to 0.

25 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, July 5, 1946:

For days Carmel has been suffering an inner conflict of major proportions. Its citizens are torn between their love of the pagentry, color and romance that is the Monterey Centennial Celebration, and their horror of crowds, a mobophobia that creeps up on people who make their homes on sand dunes or under pines.

For the time being, at least, the meat famine is a thing of the past. For the first time in several days, Carmel meat markets have had large supplies of meat on counters.

Among numerous complaints from tenants that Monterey Peninsula landlords had given notice of increase in rents, there was only one from Carmel.

10 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, July 6, 1961:

Brigadier General Frank Dorn of Carmel, who since 1953 has added the delusive word "retired" to his name, as recently as last week completed work on the book "Walkout" which is now in the hands of his publisher. Told as a first-person narrative by the author, who during World War II was aide to the late General Joseph W. Stilwell, the book is an account of the famous Stilwell march through 140 miles of rugged jungle in March 1942, when the Stilwell troops were pursued, harassed and cut off at every possible turn by the Japanese.

Novelist David Duncan was surprised to see Richard Lofton's portrait of him and his daughter, Miranda, on the front page of the Pine Cone when he arrived in Carmel last week.

Superintendent of the Carmel Unified School District Stuart Mitchell and Mrs. Mitchell left yesterday afternoon on the first leg of an Alaskan trip.

A PROMINENT Carmel attorney, rushing to make a court appearance, spent a frantic hour the other day looking for his car after finding a note his teen-age daughter left on his desk, stating, "I reparked your car — one block down and one block over." (Thank you, No-Name-Please Contributor!)

SUMMER HAS icumen in to the Village when you can behold Frances Chew practicing her karate in the driveway of her parents' Dolores Lodge.

ADD TO Carmel-Is-a-State-of-Mind Department: A long-time woman resident, homebound after a latish dinner with friends at a restaurant, came abreast of a noisy group of visitors at a midtown corner.

"Say, lady," one of them accosted her, "where are all the night clubs?"

With stiff dignity, the local lady responded, "In San Francisco."

RESTLESS RESIDENTS. Real estate people here tell us that the average length of time a homeowner remains in one Carmel house is only two and a half years.

HOW PROUD the local young people have been to take a real part in the OLAF effort. And how proud some of their elders have been of them. A mature woman observed, "The youngsters are pointing the way. They're awake and some of us have been asleep." Another said, "We may overestimate children's experience, but we underestimate their intelligence."

THE CROWDS almost cheered — on seeing the meter maid's scooter being hauled off by a tow truck in the crowded downtown area, according to Councilman Bernard Anderson.

CARMEL'S YOUTHFUL oldsters — It was lunch break for the white-haired man and his gray-haired wife. They had decided on the main choices from the restaurant menu.

"Are you having the pie?" asked the wife — the restaurant features homemade pastries.

"Of course!" the husband grinned like a boy. "That's why I'm here!"

"HOW NICE to meet a friend uptown!" exclaimed the lady shopkeeper, half of a husband and wife partnership. She was even more cordial than usual, with a little anxiety mixed in.

"Could you lend me 60 cents till I get back to the store?" she asked apologetically. "I came up the street to buy my husband a sandwich — we can't both leave at the same time — and got side-tracked in a gift shop where I went to buy a birthday present. Well, I went wild! Now I haven't enough left for the sandwich — and my husband will be so provoked — and hungry — if I go all the way back to the shop for 60 more cents!" We happily lent the 60 cents.

Corps of Engineers report underscores need for flood plain zoning

"Flood waters swirled into a score of houses near the mouth of the storm-fed Carmel River today, forcing some residents to evacuate. Waters began subsiding shortly before noon after the mouth of the river was opened by a bulldozer, but the danger of more flooding remained because of an incoming tide and more showers expected tonight.

Damage already is estimated in the thousands of dollars.

"The river was fed by the overflowing San Clemente and Los Padres dams which were filled by the heavy rain storm...Depth of the rapidly moving water at the Carmel River bridge reached 15 feet at 11 a.m., stopping after the mouth was opened. The river had risen at the rate of one foot per hour. Flood level at the bridge is 24 feet. The river bed at this area was dry yesterday.

"Carmel Bay was filled with debris and stained brown by the onrushing river water.

"There was six inches of water in every room at the home of Leonard Heller at 16th and Camino Real. Throughout the John P. Kunstle home...there was two feet of water.

"The water swept over the playgrounds at the Carmel River School.

"Residents in that area placed sandbags around their homes, many of which were isolated by the water which flooded the streets."

--Monterey Herald, Feb. 10, 1962

That was just a minor flood on the Carmel River, a flash that came quickly and subsided almost as fast.

It was nothing when compared to April, 1958, when a major flood inundated homes and washed away property to the extent of $300,000 in damages. That year 1000 people were evacuated from property on or near the Carmel River.

According to the Army Corps of Engineers, the 1958 flood ranks as a "20-year" flood, meaning that a flood of that severity could be expected to occur about five times in a 100-year period.

This does not mean, however, that a flood of that magnitude occurs in 20-year cycles. Records show that flood years often occur in bunches.

The Corps of Engineers says that major flood have occurred on the Carmel River in 1862, 1911, 1914, 1938, 1945, 1955, 1958, 1962 and 1969.

The greatest documented flood was in March, 1911, during which, according to witnesses, "just about everything in Carmel Valley washed out."

This flood was estimated to be a 100-year flood - a flood of such severity that it would happen only once during this century. Yet, according to the Corps of Engineers, "another flood almost as severe occurred in 1914. Thus, two statistically improbable events occurred back-to-back, so to speak, within a time interval of only three years."

SO WHAT'S NEW?

Much has changed since 1914.

San Clemente Dam was built in 1921, and although it is intended solely for water storage and not flood control, it probably did lessen the impact of the six major floods that have washed through the Valley since it was completed.

The character of the Valley has changed drastically since 1914.

Gone are the ranches and farms that once covered the Valley floor, replaced by shopping centers, suburban developments and high-density communities such as Hacienda Carmel.

The lush hillsides are dotted with homes, and water that once was absorbed into the ground now runs off carports and patios and roof tops, then streams down asphalt ribbons until it reaches the river.

Even the trees and dense underbrush which once lined the river are thinned out and, in some places, gone, taking with them the natural barriers to erosion of the riverbanks.

What was once a beautiful, undeveloped Valley susceptible to flooding is now a beautiful, well-populated Valley even more susceptible to flooding.

And almost nobody wants to do anything about it.

For several months now, at an assortment of hearings before the Planning Commission and the Board of Supervisors, there have been repeated reminders about the very real problem of floods.

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, among others, has asked the County to establish flood-plain zoning along the Carmel River. A flood plain ordinance is already on the books.

Flood Plain 1 is an area which is a primary flood area, namely the bottom of the riverbed.

Flood Plain 2 is the area likely to be flooded by a stream overflowing its banks.

Flood Plain 3 may lie within either of the above areas, but is property that is protected by dikes or similar means.

The purpose of establishing flood plain zoning would be two-fold:

First, it would limit new development in areas immediately adjacent to the Carmel River. This would be to the County's benefit, since the County must pay to bail out flooded homeowners, repair roads, etc.

Second, it would enable persons who now own property along the river to apply for federally-financed flood insurance. This reasonably-priced insurance is available only to persons living in areas that have officially been labeled flood plains. Application for this insurance must be made before December 31, which means the Board of Supervisors would have to approve flood plain zoning before then.

OFFICIAL VIEWPOINT

At the moment, it is doubtful that this will happen.

"There is obviously a need for flood plain zoning," Planning Director Ed DeMars said last week, "but there has never been any outcry for it."

"Attempts have been made on two occasions, and they never got off the ground."

DeMars said it has been the experience of the has received a few letters from individuals asking for the establishment of flood plain zoning. In addition to the CVPOA and the Carmel Area Coalition, he has heard from two river dwellers, Ed Lee and William Brown, and a few others "who live on high ground."

Still, according to Branson, there has been no sign of a "concerted effort" in this direction, and he suspects that most people want to wait for the new Corps of Engineers report on the river before any action is taken.

WHAT THE ENGINEERS

THINK

The Corps of Engineers is presently engaged in still another study of the Carmel River. What its recommendations will be remain to be seen.

But it is hard to see how the Corps can do anything but restate and re-emphasize many of the points it raised in its May, 1967, study entitled "Flood Plain Information - Carmel River."

The very blunt language in that report was aimed at the Monterey County government and the residents of Carmel Valley. And ac-

"The Carmel River Valley has been experiencing rapid residential, retirement community and commercial development, parallel to the growth rate experienced by the State of California in recent years. Extensive areas of recently constructed residential and retirement community subdivisions, as well as some important public utilities, are subject to periodic flooding.

"Other developments now in the advanced design or construction phase will be located on the flood plain. In the past, most of the land in Carmel Valley was utilized for moderate to highly productive agricultural uses. Flood damages were limited to relatively infrequent crop losses.

"However, with urban development, monetary losses to individuals, businesses and public property from flood overflow and poor drainage have greatly increased. With further development successive flood plain losses will multiply.

"Since the greater portion of the Carmel River flood plain has not yet been of flood plain land, the present flood situation represents a severe deterrent to possible future developments downstream, due to the health hazards in times of even minor flooding." It contains this warning about future floods:

"A repetition of the flood of April 1958 would interrupt traffic, create a threat to public health and cause mass evacuation of people and chattel property from homes built in low areas.

"While the area inundated would be similar, the resultant damages would be greater today, due to the increase in the number of dwellings within the flood plain."

Finally, this is what the Corps of Engineers hoped to accomplish with their 1967 report:

"Attention is directed to the fact that neither does the scope of the investigation nor the extent of this report include plans for flood protective works, or for the direct solution of flood problems created by the Carmel River.

"Rather, it is intended to provide herewith the bases for further study and planning on the part of local interests in arriving at solutions to minimize vulnerability to flood damages. Such study and planning in most cases will involve local programs to guide property developments by controlling the type of use made of the flood plain properties through zoning and subdivision regulations, and any actual construction of such improvements or flood protection works themselves should be performed only after a careful engineering study with permit process, or a combination of these two approaches as might be in order."

So that's where things stood in 1968, one year before the overflowing Carmel River washed out two expensive chunks of Carmel Valley Road and almost toppled Robinson Canyon Bridge.

That was nowhere near a 20-year flood.

And Carmel Valley residents, for the most part, remain apathetic or firmly opposed to the type of planning recommended by the Corps of Engineers - "local programs to guide property developments by controlling the type of use made of the flood plain properties through zoning and subdivision regulations..."

FLOODING IN THE Mission Fields subdivision just outside the Carmel city limits, April 1958.

Planning Department that "the only time people get excited is when water comes in the front door and out the back."

"We continue to be very interested in doing something about this, and quite frustrated because no one in the Valley seems very enthusiastic."

Supervisor Willard Branson has had much the same experience. Last year he introduced a Carmel River Ordinance, which had as its primary purpose the preservation of existing riverbanks and the prevention of pollution caused by dumping or just plain carelessness.

This ordinance was scuttled by residents living along the river, who said it would hamper their individual efforts to fight erosion and would be just one more law to harass the property owner.

In recent months, Branson cording to DeMars, the planning staff agrees with the report right down the line.

Among other things, the report says:

"The interest of the County of Monterey is to protect the public health and safety, and to reduce the financial burden imposed on the entire community in event of a flood disaster in certain areas. This can be done by implementing flood plain zoning regulations to discourage developments that might be damaged by floodflows. Monterey County has no comprehensive flood plain zoning in effect at the present time (1967), and many examples of improvements, the location of which show impudent disregard of nature's capriciousness, are in evidence."

The report says this about developments along the Carmel River:

developed, steps should be taken toward zoning or construction of flood-control works to prevent proliferation of damages from future floods that may be expected to occur."

As for flooding and the Carmel Sewage Treatment Plant, the report observes:

"The sewage treatment plant for the City of Carmel is located on the flood plain at an elevation prone to relatively frequent flooding. Past floods have interfered with proper operation, and though damages were mostly of a maintenance nuisance nature, the flood situation could cause serious health hazards in the Carmel River Beach State Park, located downstream at the mouth of the river.

"Though the location of the installation is deemed compatible with rational use

Carmel physicist and family return from

*Brought back no secrets,
but a lot of knowledge:*

By STEVE HAUKE

Physicist E.B. Dally of Carmel replies "No" with a laugh, then muses, "Well, no. But a lot of knowledge..." when asked if he brought back any top secrets from Russia.

Dally, professor of physics at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, was one of five Americans to engage in the first joint experiment involving Russian and U.S. physicists.

Of this unique experiment within an experiment of scientists from the world's two most powerful nations working together toward a common goal of scientific truth, Dally says, "It's the first time I know of of any group of Americans working in Russia - outside Moscow - for any length of time."

For a length of time from September last year to late last May, Dally and his wife Patricia and their four children, John, 15, Pamela, 13, David, 12, and Don, 6, lived, worked and went to school in the small Russian town of Protvino, which Dally said could be likened to "a very small American farm town where there's not very much going on."

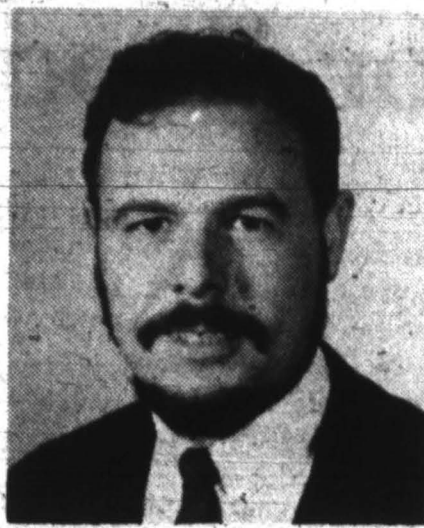

Now, if you've ever lived or visited long in a small American farm town and then grown used to the comforts and diversions of city life, you might pity the Dallys their eight-month Russian stay. But Dally explains it wasn't too bad:

"We had adequate housing, and they were very attentive to our needs and very helpful, so that our life was actually relatively easy, although," he adds with a smile, "not luxurious."

"Our apartments had bathrooms, toilets, radios, TVs, refrigerators, stoves, telephones..." and many of the other appliances and conveniences Americans depend on.

"We were surprised that we had things like, for instance, television and telephones. It was something we hadn't expected, necessarily."

E.B. DALLY

Prior to coming to the Monterey Peninsula last summer and then journeying to Russia, Dally was involved in high-energy physics research at the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center, known as SLACK, at Stanford University, where he earned his Ph.D. in physics.

The Stanford accelerator is a straight line tube, 30 feet underground, that is two miles long - that's not a mistake, two miles - and through which electrons are accelerated. The longer the tube, Dally explains, "the more energetic the particles" become.

The research at SLACK was in "the physics of elementary particles" in order to understand "what the constituents of basic matter are and the behavior of these particles."

Dally credits Darrell Drickey, a professor of physics at UCLA who attended graduate school with Dally, with initiating the proposal that resulted in the joint experiment in Russia.

Drickey, Dally and the other physicists wanted, in collaboration with Russian physicists, to be the first to try direct measurement of the radius of the pi meson by bombarding electrons with negative pions. (Realizing that the reporter had just dropped by the wayside, so to speak, Dally smiled graciously and explained that what it broke down to was that the object of the experiment "was to measure the size of pion mesons which are short-lived particles and which is one of the particles responsible for nuclear forces." Now, worded this way, this is something you can throw off at the next cocktail party.)

The most ideal laboratory in which to conduct this experiment was in Russia, at the High Energy Physics Institute's 70-GeV accelerator, the most powerful in the world. The institute is located in Serpukhov, a city 70 or so miles south of Moscow, and the accelerator is in nearby Protvino, a town which was built around the accelerator.

Dally said the Russian accelerator is a proton accelerator (Stanford's accelerates electrons) and rather than linear is of a circular type, a fifth of a mile in diameter. Whereas with the Stanford accelerator electrons have to reach their greatest speed with one run-through, Dally explained, with the circular Russian accelerator protons can be sped around and around indefinitely to attain even greater speeds.

At the urging of the American physicists, three years ago the Atomic Energy Commission and the Russian State Committee for the Utilization of Atomic Energy entered into negotiations.

Then, says Dally, a year ago February it looked like negotiations had broken down and he accepted a position with the Postgraduate School.

"We were very discouraged, it looked like the experiment would not be initiated. Then, in June, we got a telegram from them, from the Russians, requesting to know when we could come."

Dally feels the Socialist government called the Americans to come ahead because it had "resolved some internal problems." At any rate, the SLACK physicists, who had not expected the Russian O.K., "were in the middle of an experiment so we had to complete it quickly."

The major support of the American effort - the entire American community consisted of 10 adults and eight children ranging in ages from four months to 15 years - came from an Atomic Energy Commission contract with UCLA.

In conducting the experiment at the world's largest and most powerful high-energy accelerator (Dally said an accelerator is being constructed near Chicago that, when completed, will surpass even the Russian's), Dally said, the Russian physicists who collaborated would come down to Protvino from Dubna, a city north of Moscow. He said that altogether they were at Protvino about half the time, but that there were always Russian engineers and technicians on hand.

While English was the medium of communication, Dally said that when the physicists weren't on the scene he could communicate with the technicians and engineers who didn't speak English with "broken Russian."

Using the Russian accelerator, Dally, who is a native of Ohio, said, produced pions and "by using experimental techniques we were able to make measurements from which we were able to extract the size of the pions."

To determine what that size is, one more period of data collection is presently being conducted in Protvino by Russians and Americans and Dally admits to eagerly awaiting the findings, expected in October.

One of the first things the Americans did upon arriving in Russia was to rent a single car for all of them which was used for trips to Serpukhov and Moscow. They acquired the car from Intourist, the state travel agency - the only travel agency.

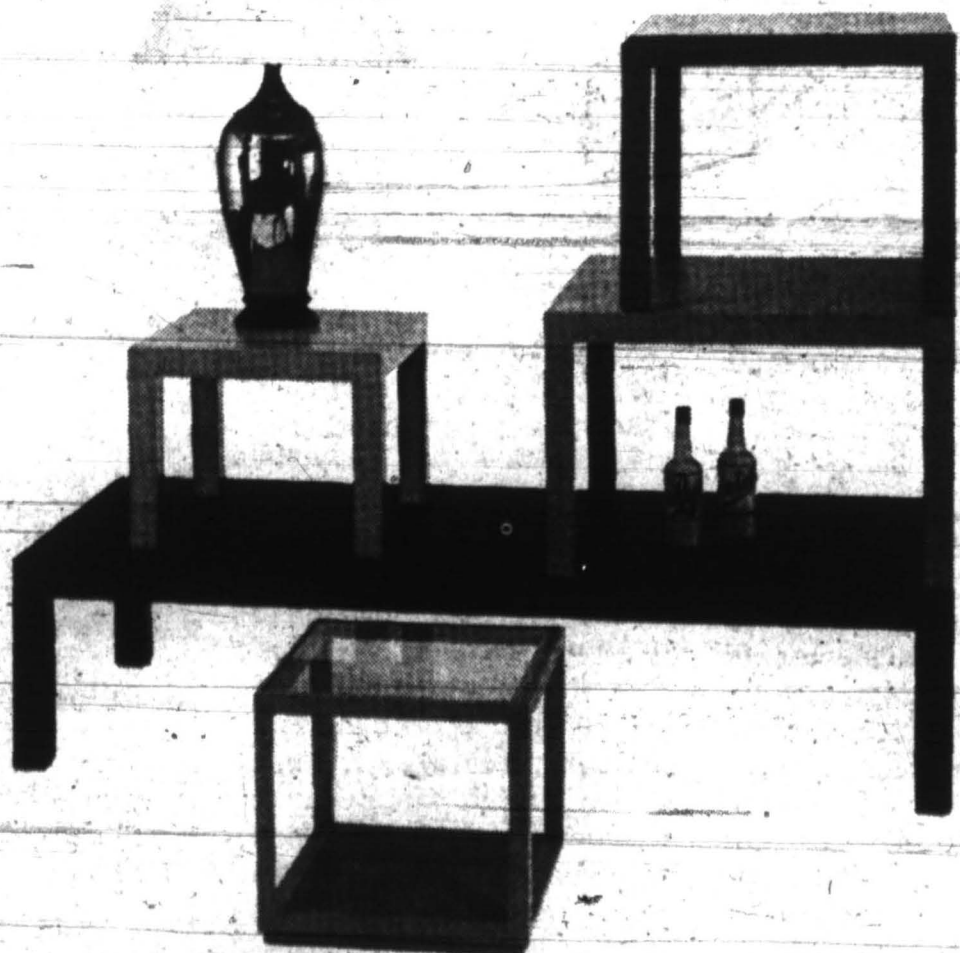

Except for the above named trips, the car was seldom used. Dally said everyone walked in the town, the scientists hiking a mile to the lab every day from their apartment complex.

working trip to Russia

"Sometimes two or three times a day, depending on whether we'd go back to the laboratory in the evening."

Fortunately, the Americans did not suffer a harsh Russian winter. "It was a very mild winter. It was very unusual."

The Americans received Western magazines and newspapers through the American embassy in Moscow and via teletype they received word of Stanford's 9-7 football win over UCLA, which might have dampened the enthusiasm of Dally's fellow Americans (Like Drickey, two of the other physicists were UCLA professors, and the fourth was a UCLA graduate student) while brightening Dally's.

Social life in Provino, Dally said, turned on the civic center which had meeting rooms, gymnasium, auditorium and a dance floor.

"All the social activity in the town centered around the civic center. We'd go there for movies, entertainment..." he said. "On national holidays they'd hold their celebrations there."

Perusing book shops, Dally said, he found a lot of the literature focusing on "Marxism and Leninism. And then technical books and foreign language books. And they have novels, but they're by approved Soviet authors."

Half of the movies, he said, deal with World War II, a subject that still obsesses the Russians.

For more sophisticated entertainment, the American scientists and their wives occasionally drove to Moscow to view the Bolshoi Ballet, and other attractions and sights of the city. Shortly before Christmas they were hosted for dinner at Ambassador Jacob Beam's Moscow residence and, just before their return to America, they returned the favor with a lab tour and formal reception for the ambassador and his scientific attache and Russian officials.

Before driving to Serpukhov or Moscow, Dally said, the Americans had to ask the Russians for permission one day in advance. "We were never refused. It was just to let the militia know we were coming."

In gaining the permission, Dally said, the Americans were restricted to a single route. If the Americans wanted to make a trip to another part of the country, (Mrs. Dally made trips to Leningrad and the Republic of Uzbekistan), they had to go through Intourist.

Dally said the Americans were not followed in Moscow or bothered, and the Russians did not ask to see the pictures he and Mrs.

Dally had taken.

While Don, the Dally's six-year-old, attended kindergarten with Russian children in Provino, a town of 10 to 15 thousand, the three older children, who learned to speak French fluently when the Dallys were in France three or four years ago, attended a school established by 50 French families who were at Provino on a French-Soviet project. John, the oldest, also attended classes at the Russian high school, where Mrs. Dally, an accredited teacher, taught English conversation.

"The kids were actually quite busy while we were in Russia with school work. And they were involved in activities, sports, music school..."

Dally said they made some good friends among Russian youth, and "learned quite a little bit of Russian."

"We were very busy most of the time. There was almost no time for travel," Dally said, explaining that the physicists were "working seven days a week, very long hours."

Dally said that young Russians up to about age 30 are bigger and healthier than their parents and grandparents because of improved diets and health programs, and that they are of almost the same physical stature as American youth.

Almost all Russian families, he said, have a grandmother or aunt who helps with the children and the granddaughters and nieces "are a good head taller" than their grandmothers and aunts.

The Americans were in Russia when the American table tennis team visited Red China and, Dally said:

"They (the Russians) were quite puzzled and there was a little streak of worry about what it all meant."

"I think they really fear the Red Chinese."

He said that "the daily life of the average Russian is generally untouched by the political regime" as long as the person remains uncontroversial and inconspicuous.

Speaking both scientifically and socially, Dally said he feels the trip was an exceptional success. "We had problems and crises, but the kind of things we could work out of."

He said the Americans, he felt, made a "smashing impact in terms of how people regarded us," and, "On the person-to-person basis we found the Russians extremely pleasant and very easy to work with in our scientific work."

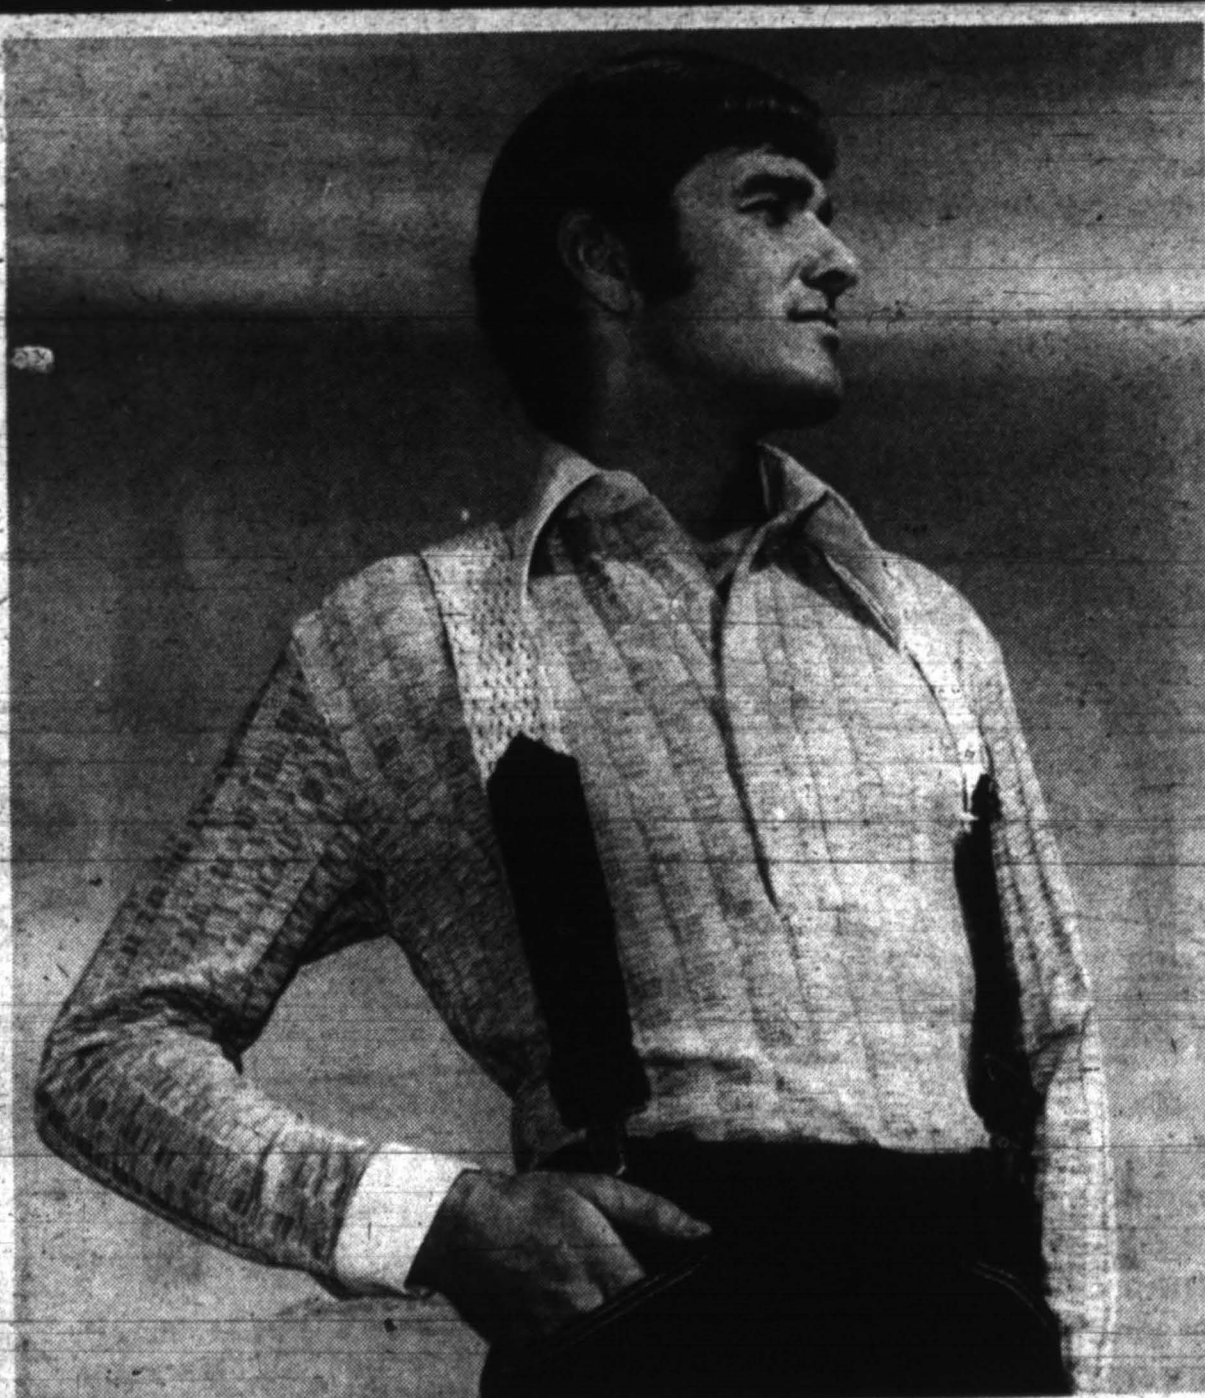

UZBEKISTANEES were captured by the camera of Mrs. Dally on a trip to the Republic of Uzbekistan, located in central Russia.

The conscience of Carmel:

'We're all Carmelites, aren't we?'

By GUNNAR NORBERG

AS THESE WORDS reach you, it will be a day less than three weeks before the high-density rezoning request for the Odello ranch down by the Carmel River comes before the county planning commission for a second -- and possibly a crucial -- public hearing over in the supervisor's chambers in the courthouse in Salinas. The date for that hearing is Wednesday, July 28. (The time of day -- or evening -- hasn't yet been announced).

While negotiations for the possible public purchase of part, or even all, of the Odello ranch are now under way, it has been publicly stated by the Odellos that they intend, meanwhile, to continue their effort to secure high-density rezoning for their entire 292-acre farm property. (The original request presented at the first public hearing on March 31, had sought authority to construct 1,844 hotel-and-home units on the property).

Many times I have said, and a great many others have said, that no more than one home per acre should be allowed on the flood-plain of the Carmel River, on which the Odello artichoke ranch is located. Obviously, any high-density rezoning request, even one which would be somewhat modified downward from the original 1,844-dwelling-unit level would substantially exceed that one-home-per-acre formula, which now applies to most of the 292 Odello acres.

But, people ask, how can we -- all Carmelites, some inside the city of Carmel, and some outside of it -- make our demand for continued low-density zoning, stick? Either on the Odello ranch, or elsewhere in so far "undeveloped" portions of the lower Carmel Valley? And isn't that area, just the place where Carmel concepts of land use, are in the greatest jeopardy?

IN THE PART of the master plan adopted by the city of Carmel to indicate what Carmel would, officially, like to see done in the "sphere-of-influence" area we're talking about, these are some of the words you can read:

"It is recommended that the ... artichoke fields both east and west of the State highway be retained in agricultural use ... appropriate steps must be taken to protect the land from the bulldozers. The lands at the Valley entrance present the most critical problem in the planning area ..."

Yes, you interject, that is all well-and-good, but just what can Carmelites -- either in or out of the City of Carmel -- do to compel this type of low-density land-use, down there near the Carmel river?

We can, of course, go over to the courthouse in Salinas, July 28, and no doubt at many other future dates when high-density rezoning requests are pending, to protest the granting of such zoning. But how can we stand any real chance of any continuing success in holding any kind of what we would consider, proper low-density zoning in our own outside-of-city-of-Carmel area, when majorities of the memberships of both the county planning commission and the county board of supervisors, come from other -- and quite different -- areas of Monterey County? Isn't the deck actually stacked against us each time we try to hold some local outside-of-city zoning line, because of that majorities-from elsewhere representation on the two public bodies which we must always face?

THAT IS PRECISELY the point made in a letter I received from Beatrice Wheelock (wife of Admiral Charles D. Wheelock, USN, Ret.), who lives at Del Mesa Carmel, in the lower Carmel Valley. She enclosed a clipping from a statement made by Bernard Van Horne, a noted library executive, who lives in sight of the sea, inside the City of Carmel. Here, in part, are Van Horne's comments:

"Recent events in the Carmel area have made one point abundantly clear but I have seen little mention of it . . . This point is that the area around Carmel, needs the political apparatus of unity . . . The events in the lower valley are creating problems for Carmel that will make the situation of the 'little Carmel' untenable . . . Thought will convince all, I am sure, of the inescapable need for a strong voice and political clout through union among the people of Carmel, Carmel Woods, Carmel Meadows, Carmel Highlands, Rio Road, Carmel Point, and the lower Valley. We're all Carmelites, aren't we?"

While Mrs. Wheelock approves the proposal for a Heritage City (which I outlined in the March 4 issue of the Pine Cone), and even considers is "possible to attain" eventually, she suggests that, meanwhile, "a large meeting of all concerned" be called, to work out ways and means to achieve the unification mentioned in the Van Horne statement -- and to achieve it, in time!

There are, of course means available legally to achieve unification through annexation, as we pointed out here in a recent column, though those means present more impediments than aids to such annexation.

THE POINTS MADE by Beatrice Wheelock, who lives some distance outside the city of Carmel, and Bernard Van Horne, who lives within the city, are important. Their words should be given deep thought by the same people who now plan to go to the courthouse in Salinas on July 28 to protest against the granting of high-density zoning for the Odello property, for it will become increasingly urgent for all Carmelites of good will, both inside and outside the present City of Carmel, to achieve the kind of unification which would provide for the making of future zoning decisions right here!

While I still believe that the optimum solution to the present Carmel governmental dilemma would be the establishment by the state legislature of a special "heritage city" status for the entire treasured Carmel area, I believe, as well, that any reasonable steps toward the achievement of a more politically effective City of Carmel should never be overlooked.

At present, the Carmel Area Coalition, which was established early this year by representatives of the various property-owner and citizen-group organizations, is attempting to focus a unified effort against the granting of any more high-density zoning requests such as the Odello one, and would be happy to hear from all others of viewpoints like those of Beatrice Wheelock and Bernard Van Horne. (The secretary of the Coalition is Kenneth McGinnis, and the Coalition mailing address is P.O. Box 21, Carmel).

Dee Kelsey weds Eugene Tassie

Dee Allyson Kelsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Kelsey of Carmel, exchanged vows recently with Eugene Bristol Tassie of Newport Beach at Carmel Presbyterian Church, with Dr. George Hunter Hall officiating.

The new Mrs. Tassie is a Carmel High School graduate and is employed at the Carmel Boys Town varsity shop on Ocean Avenue.

The groom, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Tassie of Newport Beach, is a graduate of Corona Del Mar High School and works for Laguna Seca Raceway.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father and was attended by her sister Pamala, wore a floor length Empire-style gown of white lace with long sleeves and seed pearls outlining the high neck.

Tassie's best man was Lance Jacobson of Monterey.

A champagne reception was held at the Carmel home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Tousey, jr., long-time friends of the bride.

The bride's paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ivan D. Kelsey of Carmel. Special guests included her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Hollie W. Owen of Fresno, and aunts and uncles Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Lowen of Fresno and Mr. and Mrs. W. John Hutcheson of Bakersfield.

The newlyweds took a short honeymoon trip. They will reside in Monterey.

MR. AND MRS. EUGENE TASSIE

Visitors throng Carmel for holiday weekend

Judging from reports, business was good in Carmel over the three-day 4th of July holiday weekend, for inns, shops and restaurants.

"As far as I know they were all full," Jeanette Benedict, manager of the La Playa Hotel, said of the village's inns and motels.

Pine Inn dining room host Leroy McKay said, "It was a very good weekend, yes. Of course, the hotel was full."

Pat Bond, manager of Gladys McCloud's, which was open Sunday from noon to 5 p.m., said, "We had an active holiday." She added, "This afternoon (Tuesday) still seems fairly busy. Lots of nice tourists."

"Outstanding," said Russ Harris, manager of Derek Rayne Ltd., which remained open until 4 p.m. Monday. "We got our share and we beat last year's figures."

Harris said he had anticipated business to slow down after Monday but as of Tuesday, "it's been pretty good, actually."

Presbyterian

"If I had Only One Sermon to Preach" is the title of the sermon to be given by Dr. George Hunter Hall at 10 a.m. Sunday services at Carmel Presbyterian Church.

Sunday school is also at 10 a.m.

Wayfarer

"Man of La Mancha" is the title of the sermon to be delivered by Dr. Herbert W. Neale at Sunday 9:30 and 11 a.m. services at Church of the Wayfarer.

Christian Science

Communion services will be held at First Church of Christ, Science, Sunday.

Keynoting the lesson-sermon on "Sacrament" is this Scriptural text: "To do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased."

Why it is important to do this is indicated in this passage from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy: "Prayer, watching, and working, combined with self-immolation, are God's gracious means for accomplishing whatever has been successfully done for the Christianization and health of mankind."

Services begin at 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. at the Carmel church at Monte Verde at Sixth. All are welcome.

"Stand Fast -- Healing Must Come!" an outstanding program of the new Christian Science radio series, "The Truth That Heals," will be repeated Sunday over station KRML at 6:30 a.m. An unusual healing of a crippling disease will be related by an Englishman who was incapacitated for many years.

Summer story time for kids start next week at library

Harrison Memorial Library Storytimes for July and August have been scheduled for twice a week. There will be one for preschoolers and one for second, third, and fourth graders.

The preschool youngsters are invited to attend either Wednesday morning sessions at 10:30 on July 14, August 4, and August 11 or Wednesday afternoon sessions at 2:30 on July 21, 28, August 18 and 25.

Children who plan to enroll this fall in second through fourth grades will have the opportunity to participate in informal book talks and other related activities on Thursday afternoons at 2:30 on July 8 and 15 as well as August 5 and 12. Those for whom a morning schedule is more convenient the following dates and times have been set: 10:30 on July 22, 29, August 19 and 26.

Membership in the summer reading club, "Haunted Happenings" is still open. Special recognition is planned for those who complete the 28 required books for a certificate.

Further information about these and other services provided for children and their parents by Harrison Memorial Library may be obtained by calling the library at 624-4629 and by going to the library.

TAX INFO FOR SENIOR CITIZENS

A representative of the Franchise Tax Board will be in Monterey on Wednesday to assist California senior citizens in filing claims for benefits under the Senior Citizens Property Tax Assistance Law. The representative will be at the Council Chambers, City Hall, Madison and Pacific Avenue, on July 14 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The law provides for a reimbursement of a portion of the property taxes paid by Californians who are over 65 years of age, own and reside in their own homes, who have paid the property taxes for the current year, and who have income of $3,350 or less. Claims must be filed prior to Oct. 15.

Donate trees for Carmel

WALLACE H. BERNARD of Dolores and Third and his two grandchildren, Jud Boone, 11 and Tracey Boone, 13, planted two cypress trees Friday on Carmel Beach just south of the end of Ocean Avenue. Bernard donated the trees to the city and of his grandchildren he says, "They did the planting and I helped them." He said that in planting the trees the children would have the "great satisfaction of having contributed something more than just words." Bernard has realized the value of trees since his father, a Montana pioneer, and some friends bought maples and eastern elms when Bernard was a child and planted them throughout the Montana town of Kalisabasses, now known for its greenness. As to his part in that project, Bernard said, "I was the water boy." (Photo by George T.C. Smith).

'Man of La Mancha' enjoying hit run at Circle Theatre

"It is the most successful show we've had in our 11 year history, barring none," Michael Keller said of the Community Theater of the Monterey Peninsula's Circle Theatre production of "Man of La Mancha."

The present run of the musical opened July 18th and each of the 11 performances so far have been a sellout, which was the case with all 20 performances of the play given at the Circle last February and March.

With a seating capacity of 150, it means that about 4,500 persons have seen the play in the Carmel theatre. Or, at least, it would mean that if so many people were not coming back again and again for more.

"They don't fail to tell us, either," says Keller, who directed "Man of La Mancha," "Some come back and it's the second time, the fourth time. I think the record is five."

Because of the enthusiasm with which the musical has been received, last week the theatre, which had been presenting the play just Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays, added Wednesday and Thursday performances.

Discussing the February and March run, Keller said
"never in our lives had we spent so much money for royalties and costumes, but it proved to be the biggest success we have ever had."

Although the run drew an attendance of 3,000 to the performances, Keller thinks the summer run will surpass that figure with the added Wednesday and Thursday performances.

While "Man of La Mancha" itself must be given much credit for the success of the run, Keller thinks that "even more than the play I think it is the dedication of our actors. I have rarely seen a company of actors working so damn hard on a show. They're the most wonderful people I've ever met."

Keller said the rapport
"between the actors and the audience is a fascinating thing to watch."

"To watch what happens between the actors and the audience, in the confines of that small arena, it's a terrific thing."

"Another phenomenon that is occurring that is most rare in our theatre is the people rising in a standing ovation. They come up en masse as a group." And there's no prompting, he adds.

"We are trying desperately to bring the best possible theatre we can to the community, that is for sure."

Keller reported that the show is again selling out in advance for Friday and Saturday performances. The final night is July 24.

Reservations can be made by calling the theatre's 24-hour answering service at

The Pride of Merrie Ol' England

Through vast billowing downy past small farms one comes to the ancient ruin of Stonehenge on the Salisbury Plain.
Even if prepared by your guide, with some of the history of this amazing
circle of ponderous stones, the fact that they were marked with age before Christ was born—that no
carved inscription vaguely tells their secret. Stonehenge still breaks on you suddenly, startlingly, like a cry in the night.
Since around them are the remains of mounds containing funeral urns, and weapons of the dead, they are doubtless the burial place of British kings, and in some way connected with the Druids, that strange priests who, according to the British legend, were driven from their island by the Romans. The stonehenge is a prehistoric monument, and its purpose is still a mystery.
We could never understand it, but it is nevertheless the most mysterious of the monuments of the past. It is a mystery that has fascinated man since it was first discovered.
See you soon.

Fiddler on the Roof' to be staged in Salinas

"Fiddler on the Roof," the seventh annual summer musical production of Salinas Performing Arts, will be presented July 16, 23, 24, 30 and 31. Performances will be at the Salinas High Auditorium, on South Main Street, with curtain time at 8:30 p.m.

A cast of over 30 singers and dancers will perform in "Fiddler" to the accompaniment of a full orchestra. Dr. Jeffrey Bruff will produce the show, which will be directed by Joseph Yedlicka. Musical Director will be Gary Horseley; Choreographer, Maureen Sullivan; Costumer, Pat Fowler and head of the Make-up Crew will be Linda Cooper. Sets for the show, which involves seventeen scene changes, were designed by Director Yedlicka and constructed under his direction.

Mike Rega and Marcie Schumacher will star as Tevye, the dairyman, and his wife Golde. Their five unmarried daughters will be portrayed by Carol Ann Hughes, Gail Macgowan, Susan Johnson, Liz Eldredge and Karen Royal. Featured as three of their suitors will be Tony Hernandez, Terry Smith and Mark Greenlaw.

"Fiddler on the Roof," with book by Joseph Stein, music by Jerry Bock and lyrics by Sheldon Harnick, is based on well loved stories by Sholom Aleichem. The Tevye stories were first dramatized by Arnold Perl as "The World of Sholom Aleichem," and later as "Tevye and His Daughters," before presentation in musical form. Set in the Russia of 1905, its themes of crumbling traditions, parents deploring the rebelliousness of their children, and a minority's oppression, have never been more relevant.

Salinas Performing Arts President, Dr. James Hicks, urges Carmel Valley residents to attend this, the first community theatre production of "Fiddler on the Roof" in the area. Internationally acclaimed for its productions in over 21 countries, "Fiddler" also received the coveted New York Drama Critics Circle award and nine "Tony" awards following its premiere in September 1964. Tickets will be available at the door on the evenings of performances, and at Gadsby's Music Company in Salinas.

Defending titlist to play in Trans-Miss golf tourney next week

Allen Miller III, of Pensacola, Florida, has joined the field of over 200 top-rated United States amateurs who will compete in the 68th Trans-Mississippi Gold Championship to be played at Pebble Beach July 12-18.

Miss defending champion, was on both the 1969 and 1971 Walker Cup teams, the 1970 Eisenhower Trophy Team and participated in the 1970 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, also held at Pebble Beach.

Sunset views: Forest Theater summer programs now underway

BY FRANK H. RILEY, MANAGER SUNSET CENTER

Sunday, the Fourth, saw the first of the 1971 summer programs at Forest Theater. Featured were the splendid chorus of the Monterey Chapter SPEBSQSA, directed by Neil Keefer, plus two great quartets, the Stablemates from Salinas and the Fancy Dans from San Diego. The program was varied, spirited, and well received by a comparatively small but enthusiastically appreciative audience. For those who like statistics, our box score for the day shows attendance of 167 persons, plus 27 performers and 3 staff, for a total of 197 - about four percent of the City's population.

This Sunday, the 11th, Forest Theater will present James Shuck, pianist and John F. Morrice, violinist. These young men were winners in the M.P. Chamber Music Society competition. Much has been said of the influence Forest Theater has had on the careers of aspiring young artists. Here is an example of the continuing policy of providing exposure for young performers at Forest. The extent and the effectiveness of that exposure, of course, depends to a large degree upon how many of you attend and lend your encouragement.

See you Sunday?

Another first for the week - opening rehearsals for the Bach Festival. Music and musicians, directors and stage hands, lighting experts and cookie dispensers all weave in and out, gradually working out a coordinated unity of facilities, people, programs and staging, which all ends up as the magnificent 34th season of the Carmel Bach Festival. A 34-year tradition with a spirit as young as tomorrow.

We have been offered a rather spectacular series of shows including such attractions as an eastern European folk-dance ensemble, a youthful singing group, and even an ice show! Of course, such shows are pretty expensive to import, and so would necessitate an assured sale of season tickets or some other local guarantee to underwrite the expense. We hesitated to sign up, having reservations about the support we might receive. If you have comments, we surely would like to hear from you.

Don't forget that the "Civilisation" movie series begins at the NPG School this Sunday at 7 p.m. You can pick up your free tickets at the Sunset Office between 9 and 12 or 1 and 5 daily except Saturdays and Sundays.

Wednesdays the Patio Picnic Days continue. Bring your lunch and join us. We have the coffee.

Amarillo, Texas, was a member of the 1971 Walker Cup Team, carded the lowest amateur score in the 1964 US Open, was 5th in the 1969 US Amateur and 11th in the 1970 US Amateur.

Competition will be over the championship Spyglass Hill golf course which is rated No. 1 in California. Following two days of qualifying, match play will begin on Wednesday with competition among the low 64 scorers, while the next 32 will make up the President's flight.

Also coming to Pebble Beach is Ignacio de la Borbolla of Mexico who at the age of 15 was the 1966 Junior Golf Champion of Mexico.

The public is invited to gallery the matches at no charge.

If a one-year maturity is about right for you, we'll pay you 5¹/₂% interest. The same $500 minimum applies, as well as the privilege of adding to your investment in amounts of $100 or more.

5% Investors Passbook.

This is our short term offer. 90-day maturity. And you earn 5% annual interest. Again, a $500 minimum opens an account. Add to it in amounts of $100 or more.

Of course, our regular savings account pays 4% annual interest. Put your money in. Take it out. Any amount, anytime.

Yield, liquidity, security. The three best friends money can have. Even if you only have a couple of dollars, you can open a Personal Choice Savings account at Bank of America. You see, we, too, started out quite small.

The Carmel Pine Cone

SECTION II

the mayor's report

By BARNEY LAIOLO

THE FIRST in the summer series of free Sunday afternoon presentations took place a few days ago. The program was put on by the Monterey Peninsula Barber Shop chorus and two excellent quartets—one from Salinas and one from San Jose. It was a very enjoyable afternoon.

By actual count we had a total of 177 people in the audience including one Councilman, three Cultural Commissioners, and three relatives of the staff. I was quite aware of the lack of local old-time citizens and especially the lack of support from all who wrote and spoke on public support of Forest Theatre.

Next week, a new program with violin and piano will be presented. The variety in choice of programs should tell us how much people will help support this effort.

MEETINGS WITH the Odellos are continuing and monies still are coming into OLAF. It is my wish that we may soon have some concrete answers to this perplexing problem. There is much more to arriving at final decisions on a project like this than exists on just buying a piece of ground. The Odellos and the Committee have been working very diligently to reach a fair and equitable solution to all parties concerned.

July 28 Odello hearing to stay in Salinas

Dr. Edward Marcucci, chairman of the Monterey County Planning Commission, announced yesterday that the July 28 hearing on the proposed rezoning and development of the Odello property will be held in Salinas as scheduled.

Several individuals and groups have been attempting to get the public hearing moved to Carmel, in order to accommodate the large crowd that is expected to be present.

The following is Marcucci's statement:

"It has been suggested that the Odello hearing be heard in Sunset Auditorium to accommodate the expected large attendance. I discussed this proposal with other commissioners and Planning Director Ed DeMars, and it is the consensus that the availability of documents and plans, plus certain physical properties present in the supervisors' chambers, would make Sunset Auditorium impractical.

"The meeting will be held in Salinas as originally planned. Our sincere appreciation for the understanding of all concerned citizens in this matter."

Barbara West to offer free oil painting demonstration lecture Friday in Seaside

Artist Barbara West of Carmel will offer a free lecture-demonstration on oil painting Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Seaside City Hall under the auspices of the Seaside Art Commission.

This is the second of 1971 summer series of art demonstrations planned by the commission, to be held monthly until September. Anyone interested in art is welcome to attend, according to Chairman C.Y. Lee.

Mrs. West studied in Vancouver with Frederick Varley of the famous "Canadian Group of 7" and in San Francisco with Chinese-American artist Dong Kingman, and in Carmel Art Institute with John Cunningham. She now runs her own art gallery-studio at Sunset Cultural Center, painting full time.

She also ran a little theatre in London and played with Sybil Thorndike and Lawrence Olivier; later she toured in America with Olivier and Vivien Leigh.

She also taught and directed at the Theatre Arts Colony and the San Francisco Municipal Theatre.

An art critic once described her, "...one who preeminently deserves the title, 'artist'...she finds the human body an eloquent expression of beauty...her line drawing is flawless...her creative instincts lead to a full and rich employment of color as framework and impressionistic interpretation of her central themes..."

Carmel Savings now named Palo Alto-Salinas Savings

Carmel Savings and Loan Association has now officially become Palo Alto-Salinas Savings. A joint announcement made Tuesday by Barnett J. Segal, president of Carmel Savings and Firmin A. Gryp, president of PS told of the consummation of the merger which began with negotiations last year.

Agreement in principle had been reached last January, and approval of the respective stockholders followed. Application was made to governmental authorities in early June.

Assets of the 16-office association, according to Gryp, will exceed one-half billion dollars. Carmel Savings with one office had assets of over $25 million while the PS Association, prior to merger, had assets in excess of $377 million.

With offices spanning northern California from King City and Carmel in the south to Oakland and Menlo Park in the north, the 79-year old association will be one of the ten largest in California.

Presenting Works of Artistic Excellence by Outstanding Artists

"Victorian House"

by Sonia Brown

became a Carmelite in 1955. Eight years ago she took up painting as many do in order to keep busy. She studied with a few local artists but mainly she is self-taught. Her original fantasies with her own style of applying paint make her pictures a delight to behold. She enjoys doing little people in happy scenes. Her paintings express the warmth and happiness of the artist. Sonia's paintings are already in many private collections throughout the country and are being currently shown exclusively at the Casa Dolores Gallery.

DID YOU KNOW that the great old roll-top desk in the Pine Cone's front office once belonged to Perry Newberry, one-time mayor of Carmel and one-time editor of the Pine Cone in the Carmel of a long-gone era? Perry Newberry Way, a short street in the northeast portion of the village, commemorates the man whose platform, in his mayoralty campaign, was "If you believe in progress for Carmel, don't vote for me."

Chickens? As pets?
Well, maybe not exactly pets — in the cat-dog-canary sense of the word — so let's consider them a hobby-interest.
As with just about everything else, there are chickens and there are chickens; and there are different ways to raise them, as well as a variety of reasons for keeping them.
Most people think of chickens as dim-witted birds designed as efficient egg-laying machines, or as neatly packaged fryer parts in the supermarket meat counter. In both these roles, they are useful birds, although rather uninteresting.
Anyone interested in egg production or fried chicken is more interested in chicken ranching than chicken-keeping. For these purposes, there are certain breeds of chickens that faithfully produce an egg a day, or a juicy, succulent leg and thigh.

Under the chicken-keeping heading, however, poultry somehow becomes dissociated from the dinner table — except as a conversational medium. After all, you don't eat your pets . . .
With due respect to White Leghorns, Plymouth-Rocks and Rhode Island Reds — all excellent breeds of poultry for egg and meat production — they do not especially interest us as hobby birds.
The Bantam, however, in its infinite variations, is quite another story, and it is with Bantams that most people first get involved in chicken-keeping.
For one thing, Bantams are smaller, quicker and more graceful than their larger cousins. And they have been graced with plumage that makes them attractive and decorative. Banties come in red, green, gold, black, grey, white, brown and all combinations thereof. Thus, it is possible to have a red-combed rooster with a golden crest, red wings, a blackish body and iridescent green cascading tail feathers. Put him alongside a little gold-and-black hen, or a white one with bronze specks, and they make quite an attractive pair to have around.
How you have them depends on your surroundings and your inclinations.
Poultry raising has become a scientific venture, as has so much of animal husbandry. It involves at the very least a chicken house, securely fenced, with roosting perches, laying boxes, feeders and waterers.
Bantam keeping usually involves a plot of land and a nearby tree, a bucket of clean water, hand-scattered grain and freedom.

Because these birds are home-loving and not inclined to roam, once they have been made to feel at home, they stay. Left to their own natural devices, they will roost in any tree that catches their fancy, cuddling down in a fork with much fluttering and muttering at dusk, and shattering the dawn with their heralding good-morning cries.
Of course, permitting any chicken to run loose has its risks: there are owls and hawks and opossums, snakes and dogs and skunks that occasionally fancy a chicken dinner. But we feel that these natural risks are worth having the birds free to roam and scratch about. Banties are infinitely more interesting when they have things to do and places to go, than when they spend their lives in a 10 x 10 foot coop.
Although roosters crow, we feel that anyone considering keeping chickens should have one. Not only are they more colorful, but they are faithful and proprietary birds, taking care of their hens, herding them to safety, and defending them, when necessary.
Banties seem capable of developing ties; one rooster and one hen become a "couple", and stay together, eating and sleeping as a pair. Often, the rooster will perch nearby if the hen begins to sit on a nest of eggs, and will keep her company through the three long weeks until the chicks hatch.
Because we moved recently, we packed up all our Banties and took them to a new location. But, for a while, we couldn't catch our old rooster and one young hen. This hen was not "his" special hen, but with the absence of the others, he began to adopt her.
Over and over again we saw the rooster bring food to her, drop it in front of her and cluck to her to eat. She began to follow him about, as his old special hen had.
When we finally caught this pair and moved them, too, the other chickens in our flock had dispersed on the new property. We hadn't seen them for two days when we brought in the old rooster.
It didn't take him more than a few hours to locate the missing birds and lead them proudly back to their new home. Now, he herds them about and won't permit them to leave the grounds.

Because most people scatter hen scratch about for their Banties, the birds are fairly tame and come when called. They also have a way of coming inside when the door is open and taking polite tours of your home.
When a young hen begins to lay eggs, you can provide a few small cartons lined with hay in sheltered places. Bantam eggs, although small, are rich and tasty. Leave one or two for the hen to return to and "steal" any additions for your kitchen.
An added plus of having a small flock of Banties about the grounds is that they are voracious insect-eaters. They will take care of snails, slugs, earwigs, spiders, tomato beetles and just about anything else that you'd like to rid your garden of, without harming the plants. Highly recommended by organic gardeners are a pair of Banties.
But the main pleasure of having them about is just watching them do their chickeny thing. It doesn't take long before you start collecting your own anecdotes about your own Bantams.

Street scene in Carmel on a busy holiday weekend

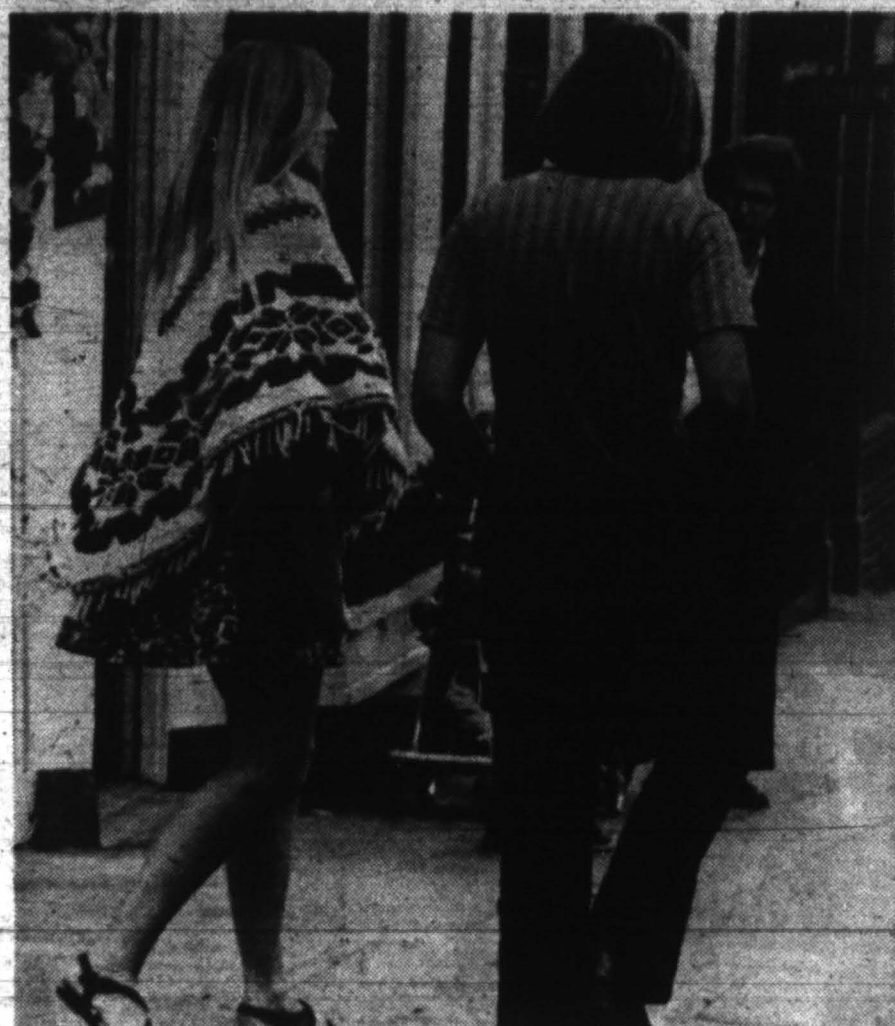

FASHIONS ARE one thing and comfort is another. Sometimes the two meet in one outfit. Variety was certainly evident on Carmel streets over the busy holiday weekend. These three gentlemen obviously give comfort their priority. For different looks see other pictures...

ROSEMARY STACK (Mrs. Robert) was one of the most beautiful women on the tennis courts during the Eastwood. The Stacks were houseguests of the Darius Keatons, along with Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Winters, the Edgar Bergans, and Erlenne Perkins and her husband Voltaire.

JAMIE FRANCISCUS talks to Lloyd Bridges during the welcome cocktail party. Jamie is one of actor James Franciscus’ two daughters.

DICK SMOTHERS, hit in the eye with a tennis ball lopped by his doubles partner, James “Lefty” Brown, gets checked by opponents Clint Eastwood and Whitney Reed. Smothers’ sunglasses were broken, but he was OK. The accident gave tournament officials a scare. Dinah Shore, who had been planning to come to Pebble Beach for the Eastwood had been hospitalized the week before with an injury to her eye from a tennis ball hit.

4th & DOLORES 624-9988A travel diary:*Where the Equator runs down the high street

By R. ROLLESTON WEST

It was on a rather vague schedule that we found ourselves at Panama. Having lived on a malarial and sea level equator in the Dutch East Indies, I thought I would like to see what it felt like in Quito, Ecuador, where the same equator runs down the High Street, but this time at 10,000 feet. Before leaving Panama, it was an education to see how this city has solved its traffic problems.

In three blocks to "Central" I counted 22 buses against 32 private cars. The buses are mostly just large cars or pick-up frames with a body holding 15 to 20 people. They drive like hell through the narrow streets and if one bus has been rash enough to get a new coat of paint (I never saw any such) it is sure to get rubbed off by some colleague who did not allow for this unexpected obstruction. Our driver to the Hilton was protected in his skillful rampage by the illuminated prayer over his head which read, "In dios confiamos." (In God we trust.)

THE CANAL

Just returned from an interesting trip to the Miraflores Locks of the Panama Canal. Today shipping they told me was booked for 56 ships, but usually the number is about 40. This, at about $6000 per ship, means about a quarter million dollars per day and Panama is consequently without taxes and very prosperous.

The Panamanians (whoever they are) have agitated to get back "their" Canal as if they had anything to do with this, tremendous construction.

Nasser, poor fool, has got the Suez Canal "back," whatever he means by that, and sunken ships and political nonsense make it quite unusable—I hope he likes it that way. When we arrived, a tremendous tanker, some 900 feet long was sinking its way down and later various other and lesser boats.

The Miraflores Locks are not really very impressive, but one realizes the vast amount of research and engineering that went into the construction—it takes 52 million gallons of water, 26 each side to the Atlantic and the Pacific to take a boat through. This all comes from Gatun Lake at the centre. On damming this up the lake has reached its fingers way out beyond the five mile Canal zone into Panamanian territory.

There's another lake in reserve on the other side, also in Panamanian land. If the Panamanians cut off the water or seize the lake or do something as silly as Nasser, the golden egg-laying goose would certainly be roasted.

EARLY FLIGHT

It was 3:30 in the morning when we arose to catch the plane from Panama to Quito. Barbara tells me "experiencia docet." I took rather a dim view of what exactly experiencia was supposed to docet at that time of the morning.

But now we have lifted off and are poised seemingly motionless over a brilliant white ocean of clouds in the morning sun. Words I think were only meant to describe people and actions...they are never any use to convey the beauty of such a scene. The clouds are parted now and we are reaching a coast line and silver rivers and tidal sloughs are flung over the jungle like the jagged flames from a Chinese dragon.

About 7:30 the captain told us on intercom that visibility on the Quito airport was below minimum and he would cruise around for about 45 minutes, which we are now doing. Braniff Airlines has a motto that since time is money they will pay you if they are not on time.

This is a good piece of psychology; they must know that Quito, at 10,000 feet, the second highest capital in the world, would often be completely clouded in and the passengers will start getting scared, so they make a joke of it. Some of the passengers did start getting up and pushing close to the windows, but when the intercom cheerfully announced that Braniff was giving everybody a dollar they relaxed and started reading their newspapers again.

But the morning clouds lifted and we came in to a good landing—and we got our dollar, a token which most people never cash but keep as a souvenir.

Wrote "The Day They Gave Babies Away"

Author honeymoons in Carmel

Robert Unson was orphaned in 1868 at the tender age of 12. The oldest of eight children, it was his awesome responsibility to give away all of his younger brothers and sisters.

The family was living on a ranch in the remote reaches of Wisconsin. Young Unson journeyed to the nearby city of Eureka where he managed to place his brothers and sisters with sympathetic families.

His son, Dale Unson, recounted this touching story in "The Day They Gave Babies Away," which was published as a short story three times in Cosmopolitan Magazine, and later as a book by Farrar, Straus, Giroux.

Dale, now a dapper, graying, successful screen and television writer, recalled this amid tales of the halcyon days of Hollywood in an interview before a crackling fire at the Sandpiper Inn on Carmel Point last week.

What brought Unson to Carmel? He was spending a one-week honeymoon with his bride, "Binkie," in Carmel, which he said is "known around the world for its natural beauty."

Unson, who wrote regularly with his late wife, Katherine, for several successful television series, including "Ironside," "Wagon Train," "Run For Your Life," and "Leave It to Beaver," met "Binkie" when she accompanied her late husband, Jay Dratler, to Screenwriters Guild functions in Hollywood. (Dratler, who died three years ago, wrote the screen plays for "Laura" and "Northside 77" among many others).

Although he "made it big" in Hollywood, Unson now eschews the glitter and glamour of the fabled film capitol for the lonelier life as a writer of books. His latest effort, "Up On the Rim," published last year by Farrar, Straus, is an autobiographical study of his childhood days in Montana.

His father and stepmother staked a homestead on the plains of Central Montana in 1910 when Dale was only six. The title is derived from a description of the family's 160-acre ranch on a plateau-like rim surrounded on three sides by towering hills. It was located near Acton, 20 miles from Billings, and the nearest house, Dale says, was one mile away.

"I read Chet Huntley's 'The Generous Years' before I started to write 'Up on the Rim' the way I remembered it," Dale said, "without going back to see it first. I'm glad I did that, because I didn't drown the book with detail."

He did make the trip last summer, though, after completing the book. "It was traumatic for me—and, I found that I did remember it pretty much the way it was."

Dale, who once was fiction editor of Cosmopolitan, and has written scores of short stories for major magazines, has tired of writing for television, which he characterizes as "a mill."

"Writing for TV," he says, "is against all the rules of writing. In a good work of fiction, the characters change and grow. For television, the characters must stay the same." He cited several well-known television characters, commenting wryly, "Perry Mason never lost a case. Nobody is that perfect."

Television, he says, "strikes for the lowest common denominator," which is very unsatisfying to a writer who has something to say. He is, though, encouraged by the growth of public television, and by the revival this fall of live drama on TV. "There is a lot of excitement in Hollywood at the prospect of a renewal of the market for serious drama on television," he said.

Among his screen writing credits are "The Star," which, film buffs may recall, starred Bette Davis, and "Guest in the House."

Dale and "Binkie" (her real name is Berenice) were delighted with their choice of a honeymoon spot. "It's such a joy to come here and see this beautiful place pretty much as it was, even though there has been some growth," Dale says.

The pair made the rounds of all the unusual shops in Carmel, too. "We bought cheeses at the Mediterranean Market, got outfitted at your wonderful clothing shops, bought begonias at the Begonia Gardens (in Carmel Valley) and loved every minute of it."

They were struck by the friendliness of the people in Carmel. "Everyone here is so cordial, so open, so outgoing," Binkie said. "It's so refreshing, especially after Los Angeles. It must be the beautiful environment that makes everyone seem so happy here."

The Jaguar V-12 Is Born!

This is a breed of cat rarely considered timid, and it announces the most exciting automotive development in years—an aluminum V-12 engine.

Because of its inherent balance, the V-12's smoothness is almost uncanny. It idles in near silence. And its absence of vibration may even take some getting used to.

The cylinders have a very large bore and the pistons, a short stroke. Advantage: higher potential power with longer life. And the power is delivered through a wide range of engine revolutions.

An eye-opener: the V-12's transistorized ignition system. With no contact points to wear or foul, a major cause of engine tune-ups is eliminated.

Plus: fully independent suspension. Four-wheel disc brakes, power-assisted. Rack-and-pinion steering, also power-assisted.

See this 12-cylinder animal at our showroom.

State water board asks for end of ocean outfalls in five years

The Central Coastal Regional Water Quality Control Board's Interim Water Quality Control Plan, which was approved by the State Water Resources Control Board last week, provides for "pretty firm guidelines" for sewage disposal problems. Willard T. Branson, chairman of the water quality control board, told the Pine Cone.

Branson pointed out as particularly important to residents of Carmel and environs and the coast south through Big Sur the Carmel-Point Pinos Sub-basin (Carmel Bay) and the Monterey Coastal Sub-basin (from Carmel Highlands through Big Sur) segments of the plan.

This report contains the Interim Water Quality Control Plan for the Central Coastal Basin. This plan was prepared to satisfy federal and state requirements for construction grant programs. The plan also complies with the Porter-Cologne Water Quality Control Act requirements for water quality control plan.

The interim plan will serve as a guide for water quality management and for waste treatment plant construction in the next two years, until completion of fully developed basin and regional plans which are now under preparation. When adopted by the State Water Resources Control Board, this plan will supersede all previous water quality control plans adopted by this regional board.

The Carmel-Point Pinos section states that:

"The Carmel Sanitary District will complete an expansion and conversion of its present treatment plant to a three million gallons per day activated sludge plant in early 1972. The current outfall into Carmel Bay will have to be replaced with another disposal method during the next five years to protect the waters of Carmel Bay."

Branson, of Carmel Valley and also a county supervisor, said this section is in concurrence with present district projects of constructing a new outfall and secondary treatment plant.

The section continues:

"In addition to the treatment and disposal facilities already mentioned, this sub-basin will require the construction of sewage collection systems in several rapidly developing areas. The Laguna Seca-Hidden Hills area can be served by an extension to the present Monterey or Seaside systems, or by the system which will be built to serve Carmel Valley. Carmel Valley will require a sewer system before 1975 if present pace of development continues. Both of these projects are now scheduled for 1975."

Asked if sewage from the entire valley might be treated at the Carmel plant, Branson said, "Not necessarily, but it could. There is also talk about a treatment plant at some mid-valley point."

The Monterey Coastal Sub-basin section of the report reads:

"Development in this sub-basin will be minor and extensive waste water facilities will not be required. Discharges to the near shore ocean water in this very scenic sub-basin will be eliminated as rapidly as alternate disposal methods can be constructed."

"The Carmel Highlands area is planning to construct a sewage collection system and an interceptor line to the Carmel Sanitary District's treatment plant in 1976."

"The increasing population of the Big Sur area will require the installation of a sewage collection, treatment and disposal system sometime within this decade. It is likely that the treatment facility will be an extended aeration package plant and that a spray disposal system (where effluent that has been given at least secondary treatment is used for irrigation purposes) will be used. No time schedule or cost estimates have been prepared for this project."

"At some time in the near future, the ocean disposal from the U.S. Naval Facility at Pt. Sur will be abandoned in favor of another disposal method. Spray irrigation appears to be the logical possibility."

Branson said the report, with its time schedules and proposals indicates "we are farther down the road" in the "battle to survive this pollution thing."

Branson said the Central Coastal Regional Water Quality Control Board has been adding scientists, farmers, sportsmen and "bona fide ecologists" to its staff and "they are starting to work very well for us."

The plan, prepared to satisfy federal and state requirements for construction grants, is intended, Branson said, as a guide for water quality management and for waste treatment plant construction in the next few years or until completion of fully developed basin and regional plans.

Among goals and objectives included in the plan: encouragement of waste water reclamation, consolidation of waste treatment facilities, reduction in the density of developments on septic tank disposal systems.

While the board also requires that outfalls extend far enough to reach a depth of at least 100 feet and the Carmel district's line presently in construction will reach a depth of just 40 feet, Branson pointed out that the plan is not retroactive.

In fact, he said he would have preferred the Carmel outfall line to extend just 250 feet but the engineers "steadfastly maintain they need 600 feet."

While, he said, his goal is total reclamation, "When we talk about total reclamation, we get into what we want and what we want to pay for it."

If people are willing to pay, he said, the district probably could have "total reclamation in three or four years."

Blasting starts for outfall trench in bay

The first blasting for construction of the Carmel Sanitary District's 600-foot ocean outfall line occurred Tuesday afternoon at Carmel River State Beach, it was reported at Tuesday's meeting of the board.

"I wonder how many people heard it," district President Harold C. Arnot said.

Hal Tennant, resident engineer for Kennedy Engineers, the district's consulting firm, told the board that the explosive was set off on the beach, not in the water, and that a gelatin-type explosive, and not dynamite, was used.

He said the blasting for the trench was done mainly to determine what would be necessary in future work.

Heinz Jurgens, also a Kennedy resident engineer, said that he thought the blasting would take two months.

Director James B. Pruitt indicated that he didn't think the charges would be too powerful because the contractors, Healy-Tibbetts Company, would be detonating the charges within six feet of a temporary pier, being built now, which will be used in the construction of the outfall.

To a question by Tom Hudson of Point Lobos, David Kennedy said the deepest cut for the trench would be 10 feet in a pinnacle of rocks.

Admiral Charles D. Wheelock (Ret.) of Carmel asked if a way had been considered to chase fish out of the area of the blasting before the explosions.

Kennedy said the Department of Fish and Game, which is supervising the blasting, was working on something in this line.

Pruitt emphasized the pier will come down when the project is completed and then quipped, "I've been joking with the boys down there, saying it should be called Tom Hudson's fishing pier."

Arnot is afraid the pier might come down before the project is completed.

He said it was possible "one big wave and that pier is clear on the beach."

Federal funds for pump station 'finally' come

President Harold C. Arnot announced at Tuesday's meeting of the Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors that the district has "finally" received a federal government grant to reimburse the district for its Rio Road pump station.

The district received $70,734, 90 percent of the promised total grant. David Kennedy of Kennedy Engineers, the district's consulting firm, said that the final 10 percent would be forthcoming after the Environmental Protection Agency audits the project.

The pump station, which is across the Carmel river from the district's treatment plant, was completed a year and a half ago.

Elections for Sanitary District board in November - if needed

Three seats on the Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors will be filled in the November general election if the district requires an election.

If more than three persons do not file for the board, an election will not be held.

Harold C. Arnot, district president, said there has not been the need for a district election for directors since he joined the board in 1962.

Candidates must file with the county clerk between Aug. 5 and 30.

The four-year seats open will be those of Arnot, of Carmel Point; Hank R. Fonseca of Hatton Fields, who has been a board member since 1964; and Willis Shepard, who lives in the vicinity of Carmel High School and has been a board member since 1956.

The terms of the other two directors—J. Wentworth Lewis of Carmel, a board member since 1966, and James B. Pruitt of Carmel Woods, on the board since 1955—run through December of 1973.

Asked after Tuesday night's board meeting if he would vie for another term, Arnot said, "I haven't decided yet."

"As far as I know, yes," said Shepard.

"Yes, I guess so," said Fonseca, adding with a smile, "If someone pushes, though, they can have it."

Past members of the board have included Keith Evans of Carmel, from 1940 to 1956, now a county planning commissioner; Clayton Neill, from 1943 to 1961, now Carmel city engineer; J.O. Handley, from 1964 to 1966; Alan Knight, who served on the board from 1936 until he passed away in 1964; John Gates; and Steven Sassoon, who later was a member of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education.

Night watchman sought at pier construction site

Point Lobos Supervising Ranger Donald Rich told the Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors Tuesday night that a night watchman should be posted at the district's outfall line construction site on Carmel River State Beach.

"I have several times suggested a night watchman there," he said, adding that although the Department of Parks and Recreation would respond to calls of vandals in the area at night, he didn't feel it was the department's responsibility.

Rich said he has twice received calls from Carmel

Meadows residents reporting vandals on the construction site, the most recent describing four men "tearing away" material from the temporary pier being used in the construction of the line.

He said he "responded, followed by the sheriff" to the call, but that it was "impossible" to find anyone in the dark expanse of the beach and flats.

Tom Hudson of Point Lobos said that some parents are concerned for the safety of their children because of the pier and the storage of explosives in the area.

Sanitary District to start monitoring effluent

The Carmel Sanitary District did not receive a letter until last week from the State Water Resources Control Board on monitoring Carmel Bay waters before and after the construction of the district's new outfall line, now being built, David Kennedy told the board of directors Tuesday night.

Kennedy, of the district's consulting firm, Kennedy Engineers of San Francisco, said the first indication the district had that monitoring would be required was March 15 when it received a copy of a letter from the Environmental Protection Agency to the state board.

Twice, he said, on March 25 and April 19, the district asked the state board to send a detailed program on the monitoring to the district, but there was no response to the request.

After a June 25 meeting of the district board, when Earl Moser, vice president of the Carmel Citizens Committee, asked the status of the testing, Kennedy said, the district again asked the state board for a draft of the monitoring program and received it five days later.

Kennedy said he thought dives for the testing could "begin late July or early August."

Kennedy said the state is asking effluent monitoring, which the district has been doing for the past two years, along with dye tests and taking bacteria counts of the receiving waters, which is testing the district has also been engaged in for the past two years.

In addition to what the district has already been doing, Kennedy said, the state is also asking for the installation of a current meter and the testing of waters through a system utilizing transects, which Kennedy described as lines which divers follow in collecting water samples.

THE PIER being constructed for the Carmel Sanitary District's new 600-foot ocean outfall line lengthens out from Carmel River State Beach. Pictured here from Carmel Point, the pier has now reached a length of about 600 feet, Kennedy said the lines would be installed in four different locations—near the outfall, 500 feet north of the outfall, 500 feet south of the outfall, and at Granite Point, which is adjacent to Point Lobos State Reserve—and that divers would take tests at different depths and the bottom along certain points of the lines.

He said he thought two or three transect dives could be made before completion of the outfall. The lines, he said, would remain intact after construction for the purposes of testing the effluent from the new outfall.

Kennedy said that the state had directed that the meter current be installed in help beds near the shore while engineers feel it would do more good a greater distance out from shore. He said he thought the state would agree.

The testing, he said, could continue indefinitely and, when asked by President Harold C. Arnot if the state might help finance any part of the testing, estimated by Kennedy at from $10,000 to $15,000 a year, Kennedy replied, "I think the state is going to assume this is an about 300 over land and 300 over water. It will grow another 300 feet. When the project is completed, the pier will be torn down and removed. (Photo by George T.C. Smith) operational cost."

"I think we should cooperate with all the other agencies," Arnot said, "and, if possible, consolidate so we can keep the costs down for everybody."

Admiral Charles B. Wheelock (Ret.) of Carmel, referring to a University of California study on pollution and waters, said, "What is not known is so much more than what is known, if you don't watch out the state can pick on you forever."

Kennedy said that engineers would meet soon with state representatives to discuss the monitoring.

When Tom Hudson of Point Lobos asked that the meeting be open to the public, Kennedy said, "Essentially, this is going to be dictated by the state."

Director Hank Fonseca said the testing procedure would be explained at the August meeting of the board and Arnot said the public could ask questions on it.

JARVIS

Former Carmel resident and village tea room owner Betsy Jarvis, 77, died recently in Santa Barbara.

Miss Jarvis, who was born in Burk, N.Y., requested that services not be held and that her ashes be scattered over the Pacific Ocean.

In the 1940s and the early

'50s, Miss Jarvis owned the Betsy Jarvis Tea Room on Lincoln between Fifth and Sixth, where the Sans Souci is now located. She sold the tea room to June Simpson and moved to Seattle.

She is survived by a sister, Mrs. O.G. Kesling of Santa Barbara and a brother, George Jarvis of Rhode Island.

Mary Jane Spence Cole dies

Memorial services will be held tomorrow at 11 a.m. at the All Saints' Episcopal Church of Carmel for Mrs. Robert S. Cole, the former Mary Jane Spence, who died Monday in a local hospital following a brief illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Cole recently returned from Europe to live in Carmel.

An award-winning painter, Mrs. Cole exhibited widely both nationally and abroad. She was a director of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art beginning in 1968, before the museum was moved from Carmel to Monterey. She resigned in 1970 following her marriage to Mr. Cole, who lived in Monterey. They left the Peninsula to live in San Francisco.

Mrs. Cole, who was a sustaining member of the Junior League of the Monterey Peninsula, was a native of San Jose. As the founder of the Young Peoples Art Show and an active member of the San Jose area's art and musical Besides Mr. Cole, she is survived by her children, Mrs. Merrill Jane Barnes of Pacific Grove and Kerry M. Spence of San Jose, and by her mother, Mrs. I. Norman Downer of Carmel.

In her memory, contributions may be made to the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Rosenbluth to offer existential counseling

Ben Rosenbluth, whose article on the youth commune movement appeared recently in the Pine Cone, has opened an office for Existential Counseling in Carmel. He says he will be available for personal counseling as well as for lectures, talks and seminars "on the relevance of philosophy to our own everyday life experiences."

As an Existential philosopher, Rosenbluth says he will focus attention upon problems of meaning, purpose and thought in relation to personal life.

He explains that, "In a world of rapidly changing values and over-intensification of social and technological pressures on human understanding, the individual is often overwhelmed with confusion and perplexity when seeking to integrate his daily life activities. Existential Counseling consists of simple conversation directed toward exploring and

It Was A Glorious Fourth!

It was quite a week that was! The weather was misty and cool and sunny by spells, and the air was clean and old-fashioned sweet smelling. Carmel was (is) wall-to-wall people in the most wildly divergent garb we have yet seen around here, and even the locals couldn't find a place to park. But the Fourth was Old Carmel, too, and the beach picnic and the fireworks still brought families and friends together in a strangely-non-modern kind of way, and the first of the summer Sundays at the Forest Theater appropriately brought Barbershop singing to a delighted, if small, audience. (We didn't see any of the people there who have been writing letters and making appearances, and otherwise assuring everyone that the City wishes to destroy a favorite old tradition, but we who were there counted out blessings and enjoyed, enjoyed.)

Still in the spirit of the Glorious Fourth, and just before Bach festival week, let us present some leftover fireworks:

BOOM!

goes the surf in the front yard of your ocean front home. From ultra-modern to ultra-traditional and from $125,000 to $350,000 — and from Big Sur to Pebble Beach — we can show you a great collection.

BANG!

— up family size and family style homes from $48,000 in downtown Carmel to $115,000 in Rancho Canada, and including a very special one near Carmel High for $59,500. Ask us what will fit your family and its pocketbook.

and you're right in the village or down on the beach in a couple of minutes' walking time from a new house on Santa Fe, for $42,500, or an old house on Monte Verde for $48,000, or one on Pico for only $34,000 and another near The Statue for about the same price, or on Carmel Point for $58,000.

ZOOM!

lens not needed from from a great house in upper Pebble Beach for $52,500, or a fabulous A-frame at $98,500, or an English Country Estate for $125,000 in Carmel Highlands — for the ocean seems to be right in your front yard if you merely look out the window, and it is framed by magnificent trees as well.

SPARKLE!

That's what this house has! Sunshine and the light, youthful touch in a traditional Monterey colonial, two story dress. Marchetta Lane in Monterey Pen. Country Club, and just $63,500.

POP!

yourself right into a traditional Carmel Charming built by THE original Hugh Comstock on Carmel Point. Nothing to do or fix up (Everything has been beautifully done already) and you could have immediate possession. Price $115,000.

SWISH!

Easily the most luxurious home in the sunny Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club — and probably the whole Valley — for only $89,500. This one is perfect for the couple who loves to spend much time on the golf course and much time in the lap of luxury at home.

FLARE!

Even if you sent one up, nobody would probably see it from this secluded location about 6 miles up in a coastal canyon — nearly new, massive stone and redwood, full of modern things inside and a handsome modified A-frame style, at $63,000. And if you spelled it "FLAIR", we could enchant you with a truly eclectic post adobe for $49,500 or a house with 21 skylights for $97,000 two blocks from the post office.

TWINKLE!

Every little star, and you'll see them all, every night, if you choose the clear Carmel Valley air for your home. Just listed a fine 2½-acre site, where you can build just what you want, for $32,500 price. Or we can give you a 9-acre ranchette or a 43-acre mountain top with a luxury lay-out of buildings and pool and riding trails. We need to know your particular tastes and price range; then we'll show you what's available.

SPLASH!

in your own pool within 30 days from the day you decide to purchase one of three great Valley properties, for the houses are "done", the pools are in and beautifully a part of the landscaping, and you don't have to build ANYTHING. Two in the $0 Thousand range, and one at $160,000. Inquire!

SIZZLE!

— when you prepare your income tax return? Maybe you should look into a 7-unit apartment house in Carmel, or a small motel, or an old-fashioned guest house, or even 3 adorable cottages on a divisible parcel in the Highlands. Ask for details.

FLASH!

Just listed! We have really been busy this week, and this is the first time you will have heard about these: One of the older, really charming Carmel houses on two lots a couple of blocks from the Mission for $45,000. A delightful, completely fenced two-bedroom redwood for $38,000, very near town; a wonderful Carmel Valley acreage with orchard and a post adobe house and guest house which will be under $50,000; a 3-bedroom, 3½-bath home in Carmel Meadows looking directly at Pt. Lobos for $200,000; a luxury pad in Carmel Valley on 3 acres, built as the library and bar of a projected 8-room home, with gorgeous heated pool for $82,500.

NEXT WEEK HERR BACH IS BACK AND WE ARE PROCESSING A FASCINATING GROUP OF NEW LISTINGS IN HIS HONOR. TUNE IN!

New redistricting plan would create three coastal supervisors

A new redistricting plan which would give Monterey County three coastal supervisors will be unveiled when the Board of Supervisors continues a public hearing on the matter at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

The latest proposal represents a concerted effort by the cities of Monterey and Salinas and several interested individuals to come up with a plan that protects local communities of interest and still divides the County into five districts of approximately 50,000 persons each.

According to this plan,

Supervisor Willard Branson's district would remain virtually the same, except that part of Monterey east of the freeway would be put into Loren Smith's fourth district. All of Carmel Valley up to the Cahoon Ranch would stay in the fifth district.

Smith would keep Seaside, and pick up additional population from Fort Ord. Supervisor Warren Church would become the third coastal supervisor, giving up his present population in the northern part of Salinas in exchange for part of Fort Ord.

The Salinas area would be split between two districts. Board chairman Arthur Atteridge would keep the bulk of Salinas and extend his district through Toro Park, San Benancio and Corral de Tierra.

Finally, the vast third district to the south, which needs to pick up a substantial chunk of population to bring it up to par, would include some 18,000 voters in the Alisal area of east Salinas.

The new plan is the least gerrymandered of any proposal given serious consideration, and resolves many of the objections raised to an earlier plan submitted by Church. That proposal split Salinas into three districts, divided Monterey more evenly between Branson and Smith, put the Corral de Tierra-Toro Park area into Smith's district and brought the third district up into Fort Ord to pick up additional population.

The plan will be given a preview Friday by mayors on the Monterey Peninsula.

Macrame demonstration at Brinton's Saturday

Macrame, the ancient art of ornamental knotting which is currently enjoying an enthusiastic revival, will be demonstrated and taught by an expert in the field, Mrs. Dorothy Hall of Carmel Valley, at Brinton's in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Mrs. Hall, one of the country's leading exponents and designers in macrame (pronounced mak-ra-may), currently is featured in the magazine Macrame by LeJeune Whitney Ackerman, another proponent of the art. The Brinton's appearance will be the only one for Mrs. Hall on behalf of macrame in this area.

Macrame, which recently was featured in Time magazine as "macramania" because of its sudden popularity across the land, was a 13th century Arabian weaving art that was carried around the world by sailors in ensuing centuries only to die out in the U.S. in 1857.

The current revival is rooted in the counterculture where the do-it-yourself potential and inexpensive ingredients have great appeal. All a person needs to get involved in macrame is a soft board, some bins, the colorful Swistraw materials expressly made for macrame by LeJeune and a few moments of instruction. From this, one can weave belts, bracelets, necklaces, earrings, tote bags, baskets, beautiful mats and even halters.

Mrs. Hall's Brinton's appearance is open to the public and free of charge. No reservations are necessary.
